Cancer changes everything. We can help.

Who we are

CancerCare provides free help to anyone affected by cancer. Our services include counseling, education, and practical and financial help from professional oncology social workers completely free of charge.

Who we help

People with cancer, caregivers, children, loved ones, and those who have lost a loved one to cancer. Doctors, nurses and other health care professionals use our services, too, to help their patients who are coping with cancer.

How we help

Counseling Our staff of professional oncology social workers provides professional help face to face or over the phone.

Support groups Share your experiences and learn from others. Groups are available in person, online, or over the phone and are led by an oncology social worker.

Connect Education Workshops Leading experts in oncology provide up-to-date information during these free, one-hour workshops. Listen over the phone or internet, or download podcasts of past workshops from our website.

Publications Our free booklets and fact sheets provide up-to-date, easy-to-read information about subjects like the latest cancer treatments, how to manage side effects, and how to cope with cancer.

Financial Help Get guidance on money matters. You may also qualify for grants to help cover treatment-related costs like transportation and child care.

Referrals to Resources Learn about other organizations in your community and nationwide that can assist you.
