Cancer is an expensive illness. The different kinds of costs faced by people with cancer include:

Direct medical costs
Doctors’ fees, hospital charges and medication costs may or may not be covered, even if you have health insurance. For example, many people find that their insurance provides only limited coverage for prescription drugs. For people without insurance, the direct medical costs of cancer can be a serious obstacle to obtaining care.

Related non-medical costs
These may include the cost of transportation to and from treatment, over-the-counter medications, child care, home care and medical devices or supplies. These costs are usually not covered by health insurance and must be paid out of pocket.

Daily living expenses
Costs for food, housing, utilities and so on may suddenly be more difficult to pay if a person with cancer or a caregiver needs to stop working.

This edition of “A Helping Hand: The 2018 Resource Guide for People With Cancer” was created to help people with cancer, and their loved ones, cope with the costs of cancer. This booklet can guide you in understanding your options, knowing your rights and knowing who to ask for help. It will introduce you to the issues you need to consider and suggest resources that may be able to provide more in-depth advice.

To view the online version of CancerCare’s A Helping Hand visit www.cancercare.org/helpinghand.
This comprehensive booklet includes national and regional organizations that offer various kinds of financial help to people with cancer. The listings include contact information for each organization and a description of the type of help provided. You can also see categories that tell you, at a glance, the type of help available. Chapter six provides a quick guide to the “Helping Hand” categories.

A Note About Financial Assistance
The fact that an organization is listed as providing direct financial assistance does not guarantee that funds are available. Patients may have to meet certain conditions to qualify for help. Organizations may also limit the assistance they provide depending on demand, the amount of funds available or for other reasons. In the case of organizations that provide funds for specific diagnoses, covered medical conditions may change. Always check with an organization for the most up-to-date information about its programs.

Tips for Taking Control of Your Finances

When you or a loved one has received a cancer diagnosis, money may be the last thing you want to think about, but taking control of your finances from the start may be the best way to prevent a crisis later on.

Talk with your health care team about your financial situation as soon as possible.
Most providers of cancer care understand that patients have concerns about the costs of care. A social worker or financial counselor may be able to help you understand your insurance coverage and help you find further assistance, including financial aid if you are eligible. Many providers will work with patients to set up a monthly payment plan. Some hospitals may have funds available for “charity care,” but you have to ask.

Let your creditors know about your financial situation.
If you’re having trouble paying your bills, it’s best to address the problem now rather than let the bills pile up. You can often negotiate with creditors. A nonprofit credit counseling service may be able to help you work with your creditors to set up a viable payment plan.

Get a handle on your income and expenses.
Figure out how much money is coming in to your household, how much you spend and what you spend it on. Contact your gas, electric, phone and/or mortgage company and ask about setting up a payment plan. Think about how your household could either earn more income or cut back on spending. Do you have money saved for an emergency? Do you have assets (a home, other property, a retirement plan, life insurance) that you can use to obtain cash?
Understand your benefits and rights under the law.
You may have a legal right to certain benefits. A social worker can help you understand and apply for benefits you may qualify for. For example, under the Family and Medical Leave Act (a federal law), you may be entitled to unpaid leave from your job to care for a loved one with cancer. If you leave your job or are laid off, a federal law called COBRA* may allow you to keep your health insurance coverage for up to three years.

Make use of resources in your family, among your friends and in your community.
Family members and friends may be able to lend you money, organize a fundraiser or help you find sources of financial help in your community. Many community-based organizations offer assistance with housing and transportation and help people with disabilities apply for benefits. If you can’t pay your utility bills, your community may have a Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program that can help. See page 51 for more information.

Sources of Financial Assistance for People with Cancer
Help with cancer costs can come from many sources. A social worker or financial counselor may be able to help you find out what assistance you may qualify for and apply for it.

Health insurance
If you have health insurance, it should cover many of the costs of cancer care. To obtain all the benefits you’re entitled to, it’s important to understand how your health insurance policy works. Review your policy to find out what it covers and what you need to do to ensure coverage for your cancer treatment. Ask your insurance company if they can assign you a case manager to help you and answer your questions.

You have the right to appeal if your health insurance company denies coverage for any aspect of your cancer care. Find out from your insurance company what you need to do to appeal a denial of coverage. If your appeal is denied, you may be able to get help from your state’s insurance department.

If you do not have health insurance, you can explore coverage options in your state through www.healthcare.gov, the federal government website managed by the U.S. Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services. It provides up-to-date information on all aspects of the Affordable Care Act (ACA) including finding insurance options by state, health insurance basics and key features of the law.

* Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act
Government programs
The federal government offers several programs that provide assistance with medical and living expenses. Many of these programs (including Medicare, Medicaid and Social Security) are designed to help people who are disabled or elderly or have low incomes. Many state governments also have programs to assist qualified state residents with medical and living expenses. Most government programs take time to process your application, so submit all paperwork as soon as possible.

Public and nonprofit hospitals
Hospitals operated by state or local government and some nonprofit hospitals may provide a safety net for anyone who needs care, regardless of ability to pay. A social worker or your local health department may be able to help you find out what kind of “charity care” or “indigent care” programs are available in your community.

Co-pay relief programs
Many organizations, including the CancerCare® Co-Payment Assistance Foundation (www.cancercarecopay.org), offer financial assistance to people with cancer who cannot afford to pay co-payments for pharmaceutical drugs. These organizations may also offer assistance with other expenses such as insurance premiums, deductibles and other out-of-pocket costs. Each organization offers different kinds of assistance and has its own eligibility rules. It is best to contact each organization to find out what is available.

Patient assistance programs
Most pharmaceutical companies have patient assistance programs that may provide support for reimbursement issues, referrals to co-pay relief programs and help with applications for assistance. Many companies also offer medications at little or no cost to patients who qualify for assistance. Your health care team may be able to help you locate patient assistance programs for your medications. You can find an up-to-date list of programs at www.pparx.org and www.needymeds.org.

Assistance from voluntary organizations
Nonprofit organizations may offer assistance with practical needs such as child care, household help and transportation. Each organization offers different kinds of assistance and may have its own eligibility rules. It is best to contact each organization to find out what is available. The professional oncology social workers at CancerCare® (www.cancercare.org) can direct you to voluntary organizations in your community that provide assistance. Visit www.cancercare.org/helpinghand to view the online version of CancerCare’s Helping Hand. The Online Helping Hand is a searchable, online database of financial and practical assistance available for people with cancer. It features the most up-to-date contact information and descriptions for hundreds of national organizations.
Finding Help in Your Community

Organizations in your community may offer help with transportation, lodging, child care and home care—cancer costs that are rarely covered by health insurance.

Local chapters of the American Cancer Society (www.cancer.org) may be able to provide volunteer drivers to take people to and from appointments for cancer care. They also provide an online database to search for local resources.

Several nonprofit organizations can arrange free or reduced-cost air transportation for cancer patients who are traveling to receive treatment away from home. Other voluntary organizations offer free or reduced-cost lodging for patients receiving treatment away from home.

Some organizations, including CancerCare®, can provide limited financial assistance for child care and home care.

To find local resources, check to see if there is a 211 information and referral service (www.211.org) in your area. For older adults, the U.S. Administration on Aging provides referrals through their Eldercare Locator (www.eldercare.gov; 800-677-1116).

Don’t forget about the power of using your local elected officials. They often have resources and connections that can be useful. For example, if you’re having difficulty with Medicaid, calling the office of your state representative might help. For a problem with Medicare, the office of your federal congressman or senator may be able to assist or offer information. Project Vote Smart (www.votesmart.org or 888-VOTE-SMART) can provide contact information for your elected officials.

and regional organizations. The American Cancer Society (www.cancer.org) maintains a database as well. You may also check to see if there is a 211 information and referral service in your area (www.211.org).

Fundraising
Fundraising may be an option to help pay for your cancer care. Make sure that raising funds will not disqualify you for benefits such as Medicaid or Social Security. Consult an organization that has experience raising funds for medical treatment. If you want the funds you raise to be tax-deductible for the donors, you will need to work with a tax-exempt organization. Be sure to follow Internal Revenue Service (www.irs.gov) guidelines for using tax-exempt donations.

Personal financial planning
Consider seeking advice on your financial situation from a professional. An accountant may be able to help you save money on your income taxes. For example, you may qualify for tax credits that will reduce your taxes. If you have a lot of out-of-pocket medical expenses, you may be able to reduce your taxes by deducting some of those expenses from your income. A financial planner may be able to help you take control of your finances and plan for your financial future. Look for free or low-cost financial planning talks sponsored by organizations such as AARP (www.aarp.org) or by investment management companies.
How Advocacy Organizations Can Help

Cancer advocacy organizations (many are listed in this guide) offer various kinds of support services for people with cancer and their loved ones.

Many of these groups focus on helping people with specific types of cancer (e.g., breast cancer, colon cancer, lung cancer, prostate cancer). Other organizations, like CancerCare®, help people with any cancer type.

Many advocacy organizations operate throughout the country, with chapters in most states and many communities. Other organizations focus on helping people with cancer in specific communities.

Advocacy organizations may offer a variety of programs and services to assist with the costs of cancer. Social workers, case managers and patient navigators may be able to help with managing finances, understanding health insurance coverage and offering advice about benefits and rights under the law.

Some advocacy organizations such as CancerCare may offer direct financial assistance with medical expenses or provide help with practical needs such as child care, household help and treatment-related transportation. Each organization offers different kinds of assistance and has its own eligibility rules. Funds are always limited and the amount of funding available can change. It is best to contact each organization to find out what is available.
A Quick Guide to the Categories

This edition of “A Helping Hand: The 2018 Resource Guide for People With Cancer” contains categories that tell you at a glance what types of services each organization offers.

The specific services the organization offers are listed underneath each category. For example, an organization offering financial help may provide assistance specifically for housing/lodging, meal delivery, medical supplies and prostheses/wigs:

Financial Help
- Housing/Lodging
- Meal Delivery
- Medical Supplies
- Prostheses/Wigs

This chapter contains an alphabetical listing of national organizations that provide financial help to people with cancer and their loved ones. Many organizations have an office in one location that serves people across the country. Others have chapters that serve people in certain areas of the country.

To help you find what you need, each organization has one or more categories listed to tell you what service it offers. (For a quick guide to the categories, see page 18.)

Please note that if an organization has a toll-free number, it is listed first. Toll-free numbers use the area codes 800, 888, 866 and 877. Then, a general information line using a local area code is listed.

This chapter lists organizations that provide financial assistance only to people living in a particular region of the country. These organizations are alphabetized by state, and the categories listed tell you what kind of services the organization provides.

Some of these organizations help individuals only in particular counties, cities or areas of the state. Others only serve individuals with certain diagnoses. Be sure to read through the organization description to find out who these organizations help. Keep in mind that local organizations may be smaller and more limited in the amount of funding they can provide.
