LEGAL ASSISTANCE: FINDING RESOURCES AND SUPPORT

You have a legal right to certain benefits, including workplace and partnership protections. Whether as someone who has been diagnosed or as a caregiver, you may need legal help at some point in your cancer experience. There are many local and national support services and organizations available to assist you.

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS

Federal law provides specific employment protections to individuals with cancer. The Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA) entitles covered employees to 12 weeks of unpaid leave per year when they or a family member is sick with cancer. FMLA protections require that employers continue to provide covered employees with the same level of health insurance while on leave.

If you leave your job or are laid off, a federal law called The Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act (COBRA) provides most employees the right to keep their health insurance, although premiums must be paid by the employee. The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) provides significant additional workplace, housing and educational rights. State and local laws provide individuals with cancer with additional protections and rights.

Oncology social workers are licensed professionals who can help you understand and apply for benefits you may qualify for. A CancerCare oncology social worker can help you find resources that fit your needs. To learn more, visit www.cancercaare.org or read CancerCare's fact sheet titled, "Patients' Bill of Rights and HIPAA."

LEGAL SERVICES RESOURCES

CancerCare's LegalHealth Clinic

CancerCare and the LegalHealth division of the New York Legal Assistance Group (NYLAG) have joined to offer free legal clinics for CancerCare clients (people with cancer and their caregivers) who reside in New York City. LegalHealth focuses on assisting people with health care-related legal needs. LegalHealth attorneys can provide assistance with government benefits, immigration, insurance disputes, debtor/creditor issues, employment matters, housing, custody planning, estate planning and advance directives.
